USAID Internship Undergraduate Students Vacancies 2025

Description

The USAID Internship Program for Undergraduate Students 2025 offers a unique and rewarding opportunity for undergraduate students to gain firsthand experience in international development and public service. Interns will work with USAID professionals to support the agency's mission of advancing global development, humanitarian assistance, and sustainable solutions in developing countries. This internship program provides invaluable exposure to the workings of a leading U.S. government agency while contributing to impactful projects and initiatives.

Responsibilities

- Research and Analysis: Assist in research on international development issues, global health, education, climate change, and other key topics relevant to USAID's programs.
- Project Support: Support ongoing projects by organizing and analyzing data, preparing presentations, and assisting with logistics.
- Reporting and Documentation: Prepare reports, briefings, and summaries of project activities, and track project progress.
- Program Coordination: Assist in coordinating events, meetings, and conferences, and work with project teams to ensure deadlines are met.
- Stakeholder Engagement: Communicate with internal teams and external partners to facilitate project activities and ensure alignment with USAID goals.
- Learning and Development: Participate in training sessions and professional development opportunities to enhance skills in international development and public policy.
- Networking: Build connections with professionals across various sectors within USAID and learn about career opportunities in international development.

Qualifications

- Currently enrolled in an undergraduate degree program at an accredited U.S. university or college.
- Strong interest in international development, foreign affairs, public policy, or a related field.
- Must be able to work full-time (typically 10-12 weeks) during the summer of 2025 or part-time during the academic year.
- Applicants must be U.S. citizens or legal permanent residents.

Experience

- No prior professional experience is required, although volunteer work, internships, or academic projects related to international development, public policy, or social sciences will be considered an advantage.
- Participation in leadership roles in extracurricular activities, clubs, or student organizations is highly valued.
